What does peace with creation look like to you?

This side shows nature struggling because no one is there to help

This side shows humans on their phones not paying attention to nature

Reflection

“Because all life is connected, each must be cherished with love and respect, for all of us as living things are dependent on one another.”

This teaching connects with my image because it tells us how all living things must live together in harmony, just like my drawing. My drawing showed trees and people isolated from each other and not connecting. But then, in the middle, one tree and one human were together, caring and protecting one another. This is how it should be for everyone everywhere. This picture demonstrates STC's theme of hope because the two species in the middle are connected and give others the belief that if they can change, others can too. After all, one person can't make a difference. It takes everyone, and hope is the perfect way to inspire others to do that.
