My Creative Piece

How can young people reconnect with nature?

Reflection

"Young people demand change. They wonder how anyone can claim to be building a better future without thinking of the environmental crisis and the sufferings of the excluded."

My creative piece responds to the question, "How can young people reconnect to nature?" By showing the phone screen, it symbolises the damaging effects of phones and devices and how it distracts us from the beauty of creation surrounding us. Immersed in screens, we often ignore the beautiful world God has given us, and solely focusing on our screens, showing that life is dull and grey when looking through one.

This concept aligns with the STC theme of hope this year. The image of the phone plugged into the tree illustrates how we continuously draw from nature without giving back, draining its life and leaving us with a sense of hopelessness about restoring creation. Yet, this recognition invites us to rediscover hope, to change our patterns, and to embrace our responsibility as stewards of the earth.
