

Georgia Richardson

From my perspective, my artwork of two hands holding a heart-shaped Earth perfectly connects with the teaching that "the climate is a common good, belonging to all and meant for all." It shows that the Earth is fragile and precious, held gently by everyone's care and love. This teaching reminds me that protecting the climate isn't just the job of a few, but a shared responsibility. Just like the hands support the heart-shaped Earth, we must all work together with hope and respect to care for creation, because it belongs to every person, now and in the future.