A quote from laudato si is the common good when it comes to people and their well being colour is always the way whether its music thats upbeat, flowers that are colourful or even a school that is so colorful the minute you step into it you already feel welcome. this connects to my art piece by the world revolves around colour and when there's no colour the community starts to be distant and doesn't like each other. At the start movies were black and white no the greatest thing to watch you would always be so bored or just couldn't understand by the ribbon was so important if there was no colour. But now over time movies have changed and now with colour it makes a lot more sense and you would want to have more of it joining your family on the couch watching shows in the theater with friends. This brings the community together by feeling the love of one and other. Scientist have proven that certain colours can give people hope such as green and yellow are most commonly used representing hope so that's why most of my picture is green or yellow or have the brightest colour that could easily catch your eye.
